IN THE SOCIAL SWIM.

Bishop F. D. Huntington, in the October Forum, describes fashionable society "as a something too formal for an institution, too irregular for an organization, too vital for a machine, too heartless for a fraternity, too lawless for a school, too decent for a masquerade, with too much lying for a bureau, and too many passions for a pageant. There are the competitions, matches, risks, calculations of a perilous game, the interchanges of an imponderable, immaterial commerce, musical voices from inharmonious breasts, spiteful courtesies, magnificent meannesses. There are songs of peace, flying arrows of malice and revenge, bonds and fragments of friendships, charming veils over hidden borrors, laughter rippling over dark depths of silent agony.

One has only to reflect a moment how considerable a section of the lives of many men and more women these activities occupy, what capacities they include, what forces they engage, the interplay between life and life, the issues and destiny of character, the angust responsibility, to comprehend that 'society,' even in this limited sense, is a study for the wisest minds." FIRST LOVE.

She is not dead, and she is not wed!
But she loves me now, and she loved me then!
And the very first words that her sweet lips said,
My heart grew youthful again.

And I will marry my own first love, With her primrose face; for old things are best.
And the flower in her bosom. I prize it above
The brooch in my lady's breast.

The world is filled with folly and sin,
And Love must cling where it can, I say;
For Beauty is easy enough to win,
But one isn't loved every day. And I think, in the lives of most women and men, There's a moment when all would go smooth If only the dead could find out when

To come back and be forgiven.

—Owen Meredith.

GREENROOM GOSSIP

It is not at all likely that we shall see again this season so perrect a performance in every way as "Twelfth Night" in the hands of Miss Marie Wainwright and her company. In the first place there is a personal charm about Miss Wainwright's Viola and an artistic finish about all she does in that rarely romantic character that is not often found nowadays. We can hardly measure the merit of this Viola now. Suffice it to say that Miss Wainwright will be Suffice it to say that Miss Wainwright will be most welcome in that sweet guise whenever she comes this way. Unlike so many of our leading actors, Miss Wainwright has had the wisdom to gather about her none but arrists. So we have an even performance, and but little injustice to the great master's work. Nobedy can ask for a better Sir Toby than Mr. Owen has given us; few will desire a richer rendering of Matvoito than Mr. Barton Hill's. A comely, nierry-witted Maria comes naturally from Louise Muldener—whose powers in comedy should bring her a surfect of honors some day. With nobody in the cast can we housesty quarrel. Congratulations are really due to the whole band of players, and the audiences that have been wise enough to see them, I think, will permit me to say that they present those congratulations.

In the performance of Shakespeare's plays, I hold that the grandeur of the story and the immortal lines do not benefit by scrubby scenery, full of anachronisms and glaring incongruities, for a background. Nor is it an excuse for costumes mean, tawdry and untrue to the time and locality of the play to say that the almost divine poetry of Shakespeare needs o assistance from milliner and tailor. In spite of Shakespeare's own assertion that "good wine needs no bush," I think it looks better and tastes better if the circumstances are appropriate; a thin glass suits our modern lips better than a thick one, and a little ice in the pail is not to be laughed at.

Hence "Twellth Night" approaches an ideal deliverance in this case, because the costumes congruities, for a background. Nor is it an Hence "Twellth Night" approaches an ideal deliverance in this case, because the costumes are rich and true to the era of the play—and as true in local color as Shake-peare intended—and because the securery is a delight to the eyes and an aid to the understanding of the story.

WHAT the fate of "The United States Mail" will be depends upon seve events. As it is it is a farce comedy that has achieved success, and one that might be made a still greater sucexpense. At this writing nothing is really set-tled about the future of the play, further than tled about the future of the play, further than that it goes to Wheeling next week and probably to other towns near Pittsburg. If Mr. Jenks were in a position to command the ordering of the play from top to bottom with $1,000 or $2,000 to spend; if a manager of experience had charge of the advance work, and a firm di-ciplinarian took hold of the company, many are of the opinion that "The U. S. Mail" would be a great money maker.

The company needs a new soubrette, Miss Kate Pavis needs more opportunities to reveal her abilities, and another comedian would increase the strength of the play amazingly. It will be a great pity if Mr. Jenks' clever work goes to the wall. It made a great deal of money at the Bijou.

HEPBURN JOHNS.

The Programme.

THEY say that "My Aunt Bridget," which will be seen at the Bijou Theater this week has been greatly strengthened since it was last seen in this city. The cast gives evidence of the truth of this assertion. It is unusually strong and contains such musical comedy favorites as George W. Monpoe, John C. Rice, Bernard Dyllyn, John J. Raffeal, of M. Caull Opera Company; W. A. Mack, James Cavanaugh, Victor Good, Gus Williams, the Westmann, and Mackey Magnetal Roya Catherine, Lorente Madneral Roya Catherine, L augh, Victor Good, Gus Williams, the Westminster Madrigal Boys, Catherine Lingard, of

M. Post, Catherine Gerald, Lena Saffi, Nellie Rosebud ("Little Rosebud"), Carlotta Saffi, the Nepolitan Trio, and Miss Leia Merville. The play is the work of Mr. Scott Marble and is doubtless the best thing he has written. The main character of Aunt Bridget, which is taken by George W. Monroe, represents a somewhat exaggerated type of an ignorant Irish woman. The next character of importance is that of P. Allon McVetgh, who came over to this country with a fortune, which norant friss woman. The next character of importance is that of P. Allon McVetgh, who came over to this country with a fortune, which he rapidly squandered, but in the meantime had been surrounded with rather aristocratic acquaintances, from whom he tries to conceal the fact that he is poor and that he has to teach a dancing school. He has a maiden aunt in ireland who he understands is rich, and he induces her to come to this country, that he might benefit by some of her wealth. Sie arrives at a rather unexpected moment and shocks her nephew's friends by her lack of refinement. Mr. Monroe has always been sole to make his audiences laugh till they are tired. Mr. Rice is equally good as the nephew. Lena Merville brings the brightness that was last shown in "The "Oolah" to the part of Polly Gilder, and one of the hits of the pieces is said to be her singing of the new song "You Should Hear Her Whistling." a take-off on Mrs. Shaw. Miss Catherine Lingard comes from comic opera to comedy with great success it is said, and she has won golden opinions for her voice. The rest of the company should be in keeping with the stars, and the Westminster Madrigal Boys and the Neapolitan two are highly spoken of. The costumes are said to be porgeous and constantly coangenz. Of music there is plenty and all of it is declared to be new. There will be a matinee on Tuesday, G. A. R. Day.

A NUMBER of individuals in this community are wearing U. V. La shield buttons who are not in obers of that organization, and there is a law by which offenders of this ki...d can be fined and imprisoned. It is quite likely that an example will be made of some of them in the near future.

THE route of the Grand Army Day parade is republished by request: Along Smithfield street to Second avenue, to Grant street, to Fifth avenue, to Market street, to Liberty street, to Seventh street, across Seventh street bridge to Church avenue, to Cedar avenue, to North avenue, to Federal street, passing in re-view at the Diamond. COMBADE GEORGE BUREOUGHS, of Post 41, who is the oldest Grand Army man in Western perneyivania, will not be able to march in the parade and bear his old colors on Tuesday, but he will turn out with the comrades in carriages. He was color bearer in the Sixty-tuird Regiment and was shot down at Maivern Hill; but he managed to save the colors, and has borne them on many notable occasions since the war.

LEGION HALL, No. 77 Sixth avenue, headquarters of Encompment No. 1, Union Veteran Legion, to-morrow night will be the scene of a very impressive ceremony, being the annual memorial services over their dead for the year previous. Eight of the old veterans have pear orevious. Eight of the old veterals have passed away. Chaplain-in-Chief Rev. John A. Danks will deliver the addre s, and the entire "Boy choir" of St. Peter's Church will furnish the impressive music. The meeting will be open to all, and notwithstanding the fact that notices have not been sent out, it is expected a large audience will be present.
